Good Source's New Pantry Box Offers a Shelf Stable Solution to Food Banks Nationwide

San Diego, Calif. – July 28, 2010 – Bulk food supplier Good Source Solutions' Non-Profit Division delivered their first shipment of shelf stable pantry boxes to the Alameda Food Bank in Alameda, CA early last week. These pantry boxes are filled with nutritious, non-perishable food items and will be distributed to low-income residents in the area.

Each pantry box provides a weekly supply of shelf stable foods to households within Alameda that meet income requirements.

"We are excited to team up with the Alameda Food Bank to offer the pantry box to the residents in the area. With so many Americans struggling to make ends meet, this was a phenomenal opportunity to provide relief," explains Rene Flohr, Vice President of the Non-Profit Division at Good Source.

The Pantry Box Delivers Relief

Every month, food banks and community outreach programs are able to procure pre-assembled 26-pound boxes of non-perishable groceries through Good Source's Non-Profit Division. Each pantry box consists of proteins, fruits, vegetables and grain items. Since the boxes are stocked with non-perishable items, they provide a reliable option for emergency relief as well as minimize delivery and storage costs.

About Good Source Non-Profit Solutions:

Good Source Non-Profit Solutions is dedicated to partnering with food charities and other non-profit organizations to help fight hunger and poverty in America and abroad. Every food bank and every feeding program faces different challenges, and the food distribution company's specialty is tailoring services to the needs of their customers. Whether customers are piloting a new program, restocking staple items, responding to agency requests or trying to improve the quality of products on store shelves, Good Source will offer creative, cost-saving recommendations to help meet food service goals.
